OUR MOTTO:—
The Best Possible Work at All Times.

Do You Eat Oysters.

There used to be just one way to ship oysters. That way was to dump the oysters in an old wooden pail, dump ice water in with the oysters, put in some "embalming" fluid and then the oysters were churned against the ice absorbing all the dirt and impurities until you had a dop unit for the stomach of the strongest man.

THE NEW WAY—Redderson sells oysters that are shipped in patent carriers. This carrier consists of two parts. The oysters are in the inner, sealed air tight receptacle, waterproof, dirt proof and germ proof. The ice is in the outer receptacle, and is made to keep the oyster not destroy it. Buy Naturally Flavored Oysters and Not Dope. Redderson is the only man who sells "Sealship" oysters.

JOCKEYS IN TRAINING

KEEPING THE WEIGHT DOWN IS NOT A DIFFICULT PROBLEM.

Fattening Foods Are Avoided, and Judicious Exercise Is Coupled—As a Rule, Riders Last a Dozen Years and as a Class Are Not Saving.

"It is a popular belief," a well known trainer said to a reporter recently, "that a jockey has to resort to all sorts of injurious practices in order to keep his weight within required limits. The idea, however, is a far stretched one. Of course a jockey has to go through certain exercises each day and has to be very much more careful regarding what he puts in his stomach than most people in order to keep his weight down and from acquiring a superfluity of flesh, but he certainly does not starve himself, as is generally supposed. If he did so he would break down entirely in a very short time. A jockey must also be in the best possible physical trim and have his wits about him before a race, and to attain that he must be careful how he uses his constitution."

"There are two very important things a jockey has to consider in studying his dietary. He must see to it that his food is of the best quality and that it contains practically no flesh forming properties. All such fattening foods as, for instance, soups, beef, pork, potatoes, puddings and pastries a jockey must deny himself. Coffee, tea or other drinks are only taken very moderately, as all liquids help more or less in putting on flesh."

"Although a jockey has to eschew such foods, there are many other varieties which he gets just as much pleasure in eating and which at the same time are equally as good and strengthening for his constitution. A few days before a race a jockey who has a mount in it will not stint himself—provided he has no fear of overtopping his proper weight for the race—in anything which he thinks will not interfere with his digestive apparatus."

"Some jockeys, of course, take on and lose flesh quicker than others. I have known one or two who were particularly anxious to ride in certain races, but for which they were perhaps as much as eight or nine pounds too heavy, who reduced that weight in the same number of days. To accomplish that, however, they have to resort practically to a 'starving diet,' leaving as little as the strain on the vitality will permit without breaking down and trying to reduce their overweight by certain sweating exercises. It is needless to say that no jockey could stand too frequent repetitions of such severe measures to subtract from his weight without danger of permanently injuring his health and even sacrificing his life; still, many willingly resort to such 'get light weight quick' methods where they see good opportunities of making a name or a pile of money for themselves."

"It must be remembered that by nature jockeys as a whole are not of substantial physique or imposing in height, although they are as tough as whipcord. If they were, therefore, to indulge every day in the heavy bill of fare that the average business or working man partakes of it is not probable that they would increase much in weight or height. You often see jockeys in the big hotels and restaurants at the various racing sections after a race tucking in big and expensive dinners with a gusto and relish that would give a chronic dyspeptic an appetite for hard tack."

"Walking, running, cycling, punching the bag and hurdle jumping are favorite exercises among jockeys to keep their weight down. On going out for a walk or run they wrap themselves in the thickest of woolen sweaters and other heavy clothing, no matter how high the temperature may be, and the exercise is kept up for a distance perhaps of eight or nine miles, or, as we say, until you are 'drowned in sweat.' Turkish baths are also frequently indulged in by many, and they must wear excessively warm clothing after, and also when going for a gallop, no matter if the weather be boiling hot."

"I should say that ten or twelve years is the average of a jockey's active turf life. The length of his career, however, depends a great deal on his riding ability and luck."

"Jockeys are not of a saving class and with but few exceptions I know of none who have ever managed to put enough money away to keep him in even half decent comfort after retiring from the turf. The majority, however, succeed in scraping up a bank roll of sufficient dimensions to start in some business. Like retired pugilists, they have a fondness for the liquor business, and I know a few one time jockeys who are prospering in that trade in different parts of the country. Others, again, become 'bookies,' poolroom keepers and enter into such businesses as enable them to gratify their inveterate love for gambling. I know of only one ex-jockey who is an exception to this rule. He retired some years ago with $50,000 to his credit, and he immediately went into the real estate business in New Jersey. Today he is doing well. He was fortunate enough, however, to receive a good common school education in his early boyhood days—and that's a thing jockeys very rarely get. Outside of their knowledge of horsemanship the great majority are as ignorant as red Indians."—New York Times.

Money Talks.

"I suppose Dunley likes to argue as much as ever and is continually worried as usual."

"No; he's more successful now since he got wealthy."

"What has his wealth to do with it?"

"Well, when he sees he's losing he just offers to 'bet a hundred,' and that settles it."—Philadelphia Press.
